MUCH RESPECTED MATRON IS DEAD

Mrs. Ella Bundy, 62 Years Old, Expired at Spiceland Home This Morning.

PNEUMONIA CAUSED DEMISE

Body to be Brought Here For Short Service so Aged Mother May Attend.

Mrs. Ella Bundy, sixty-two years old, matron of the Spiceland Orphans Home, daughter of Mrs. Martha Cook and sister of Mrs. Lon H. Havens, both of this city, died at the Spiceland home early this morning of pneumonia following a comparatively short illness. She has been in a critical condition for the last few days and yesterday physicians almost despaired of saving her life. She was seriously ill for several days before relatives were called to her bedside. Mrs. Lon Havens of this city has been at her bedside for several days as has her daughter, Mrs. Hudson Landers of New Castle. Mrs. Earl Churchill of Buffalo, N. Y., formerly of this city, a daughter of the deceased, was telegraphed to come Monday if she expected to see her mother alive.

Mrs. Bundy contracted a very slight cold which soon developed into pneumonia. On account of her age, it was impossible for the attending physicians to stop the ravages of the disease. Monday she was very much worse and Dr. J. C. Sexton of this city and Dr. C. E. VanMatre of New Castle were called into consultation with the Spiceland physician. They were unable to do much good and she was very low Monday night. Yesterday morning she was slightly improved, but became worse later.

Mrs. Bundy was born in Spiceland, October, 16, 1848. She spent most of her early life there but later became a resident of Rush county. After the death of her husband, David Bundy, which occurred many years ago, Mrs. Bundy and her two daughters resided here, living in the Carmichael home.

Mrs. Bundy had been matron of the Spiceland Orphan's Home since 1905 and has operated it successfully for Rush and Henry counties. The home is kept up by the two counties, where orphans are sent from either place to live. Previous to her appointment to the Spiceland home, Mrs. Bundy was matron of the Rush county orphans home which was located on the farm north of the city that is now owned by Amos Blackledge. For six years Mrs. Bundy managed the local institution until it was done away with and Rush and Henry counties joined in one home for their orphans. She was appointed to take charge of the joint home.

Mrs. Bundy is survived by her mother, Mrs. Martha Cook and one sister, Mrs. Lon Havens, both of this city; and two daughters, Mrs. Earl Churchill of Buffalo, N. Y., and Mrs. Hudson Landers of New Castle, formerly Miss Mida Bundy of this city. Mrs. Cook resides at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Lon H. Havens at the corner of Main and Seventh streets. She entered her ninetieth year last September and on account of her extreme old age was unable to be at her daughter's bedside during her illness.

The funeral services will be conducted at the Spiceland home tomorrow afternoon. The body will be brought here Friday morning and a short service will be held at the Havens home so that the aged mother of the deceased may be present. Mrs. Bundy will be buried in East Hill cemetery beside her husband.

NEVER BEFORE WAS HE A SANTA CLAUS

Verne Norris, Clerk and Republican County Chairman, Gets Unusual Request Throught the Mail.

SMALL BOY WANTS DRUM, ETC.

Verne Norris, clerk of the circuit court and county chairman of the Republican party, has served many capacities, but never before as Santa Claus. He has never donned the false face, gray wig and whiskers to make the little ones happy, but he may have to if he receives any more communications like the one received yesterday when a letter to Santa Claus was delivered to him by the postman. It was addressed to "Republican Headquarters," meaning, it is supposed, to the Daily Republican. The mail man naturally believed that it was intended for the head of the Republican party. This is what Verne Norris would be forced to buy if he assays the role:

Dear Santa Claus

Please send me a drum, Indian suit and a gun and ofanges, nuts, candy and a ring and a fiddle and a lantern.

WIDOW FIGURES HAS NO CHOKE IN REAL ROMANCE

Mrs. Nora Cage of Waldron is Soon to be Married to Dr. J. H. Wyble of Keota, Iowa.

MAIL IS MATRIMONIAL AGENT

Physician Met Comely Widow Just Three Weeks Ago While on Visit in Waldron.

A pretty story of how a comely widow wooed and won by a prosperous physician was brought to light today when it became known that Mrs. Nora Cage of Waldron, and Dr. J. H. Wyble of Keota, Iowa, were to be wedded within a few weeks, says the Shelbyville Democrat.

Dr. Wyble recently returned to his home after spending a week here, where he saw for the first time the widow who is soon to become his life partner, and before leaving he confided to friends that the wedding would take place before Christmas.

Although three weeks ago was the first time they had seen each other the couple had been in close correspondence for the last two months and it was through the agency of Uncle Sam that the romance which is soon to be culminated was nourished and that the irresistible darts of Cupid were sped across the States to their respective destinations.

About two months ago some friends of Mrs. Cage met Dr. Wyble in Buffalo, while on a trip to the Niagara Falls, and learning that he was wasting his life away in the State of bachelorhood they persuaded him to strike up a correspondence with Mrs. Cage. This was done more as a joke than anything else and the incident had passed their memories until one day three weeks ago when Dr. Wyble arrived in this city.

The first postal card had brought another, but these modes were soon abandoned for letters which went back and forth at frequent intervals, and when the physician arrived to greet the pretty widow both were not only not disappointed, but were even agreeably surprised. Dr. Wyble is a leading practicing physician in Keota and is a native of Denmark and while here he made a fine impression on all who met him. The physician remained here a week and during that time all the arrangements were completed for the approaching wedding.

Mrs. Cage is the daughter of Mrs. R. R. Washburn of Waldron, and although she formerly lived in this city, she now makes her home with her mother. She is well and favorably known in this county. An interesting fact in connection with the wedding is that Mrs. Cage's father was a physician, and that her brother, Dr. Harry Washburn, is one also, so that she will be considerably at home with the other doctor from Iowa. Mrs. Cage has hundreds of friends in this county and the Democrat wishes to join with them in extending congratulations in advance.

RETIRE FARMER MARRIES WIDOW

Mrs. Anna Ochiltree of Glenwood and Jesse Kirkpatrick Are Wedded Here Today.

PLAN EXTENSIVE HONEYMOON

Mrs. Anna Ochiltree, widow of the late Milton Ochiltree, recently of this city, but now a resident of Glenwood, was married to Jesse Kirkpatrick, living at the corner of Willow and Ninth streets some time today. They planned to take a second trip into matrimony—as each one has been married before—today and leave immediately for an extensive honeymoon through the East, where they will visit New York City, Boston, Washington, D. C., and several other cities and points of interest. There is an air of secrecy about the marriage as the widow and widower had planned to keep it quiet until they had left the city. A relative of the bridegroom said that they were to get married today, but the time, the place and the minister were not known. Mr. Kirkpatrick is a prominent retired farmer.

HAS NO CHOKE IN HIS HEART

Such is Assertion of Frank Bender on Witness Stand in Divorce Hearing.

HIS JEALOUSY WAS THE CAUSE

Jury in Smiley-Knecht Damage Suit Disagrees and is Discharged—Vote 6 to 8.

The divorce proceeding, filed by Mrs. Fanny Bender against her husband, Frank Bender, occupied the time of the court today. Both the plaintiff and the defendant were on the stand, each giving their side of the case. The defendant said jealousy was the cause for most of their trouble. Judge Blair took the evidence under advisement and will return his decision later.

Mr. Bender said that he and his wife had had trouble, but that it was mostly due to the fact that he was jealous of her. In regard to the altercation between the two people, when, according to the allegation in the divorce complaint, the defendant choked her, Mr. Bender stated to the judge that he had no choke in his heart.

"No sir, I have no choke in my heart and I would not harm a hair on that woman's head, because I love her," was what Bender told the judge.

Judge Blair asked Mr. Bender if he believed that they could live together now without any trouble. He replied that they could so far as he was concerned, because he was devoted to her. Mrs. Bender told the judge in answer to the same question that she did not believe they could live as man and wife and not have trouble.

The ending of the Knecht-Smiley damage suit was the only other important thing which happened in the circuit court. The jury disagreed, the vote standing six to six and was discharged. It is probable that a new trial will be held. Smiley asks for $200 damages for the "death of a horse, caused by its neck being broken, when it frightened at Knecht's auto."

DEAD AFTER SHORT ILLNESS

He was 68 years of age and besides a widow is survived by four children, Anna and Frederick of Spiceland, Herbert of Lexington, Okla., and Mrs. Cecil Parker of Chattanooga, Tenn.

The Daily Republican Santa Claus fund went up by jumps and leaps today by reason of the fact that one five-dollar subscription was made besides a number of small ones. Many of the smaller donations are from children in the city who seek to make a happy Christmas for their poor friends. Their giving is encouraged and it is to be hoped that many more of them will respond.

All of the local men who made five-dollar subscriptions last year have given the same amount this year with one exception and he has said that he would duplicate his charitable act of last year. The small subscriptions are urged now so that it can be determined now how much and what to buy. Too much emphasis can not be placed on early giving as the managers must have the money early in order to spend it judiciously and to gain the best results.

The operators of the Rushville Art Brass company have signified their intentions of making a valuable piece of arts and craft work and placing it in a down-town store window to be sold to the highest bidder. The piece will be their best work and will be donated to the Daily Republican Santa Claus fund, the proceeds to be used to buy presents for the little sufferers of Rushville.

Such work is to be commended and agitated if possible. The Connersville News is operating a Santa Claus fund similar to the one being managed by the Daily Republican. Yesterday a crowd of fellows arranged to take a collection and managed to get twenty dollars. They called it a "Jack-pot" and donated it to the fund. Many similar schemes were used here last year.

It is hoped that enough money will be in by the first of next week so that the buying can be started. It will require all of the last week for the wrapping so that practically all of the presents should be bought before the last week before Christmas. Only another nail in the early-donation request.

YULETIDE PERIOD OF TORTURE

Read "The Night of the Children" and Learn of the Shopgirl Who Worked Fifteen Hours Daily and Spent Her Holiday Delirious in a Hospital So Belated Shoppers Could Be Satisfied.

DO YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING EARLY.

The crusade to persuade millions of thoughtless Christmas shoppers to make their purchases early is on again. For years this carelessness has caused the mental and physical wear and tear of the employees of the big department stores and the little shops alike. The week before Christmas sees salesgirls working fifteen hours a day because happy parents, dutiful children, expectant bridegrooms, etc., think it necessary to delay their shopping until the eleventh hour. For all this the shopgirl suffers. It was to aid this cause that James Oppenheim wrote the following story for the Survey.

The Night of the Children

By JAMES OPPENHEIM

Christmas was in the air. The frosty, starry night turned golden in the city avenues. Up and down the pavement the crowds swept, laughing, talking, jostling, cheeks ruddy with the weather, eyes sparkling with the lights. As they moved there unrolled beside them the endless film of brilliant shop windows crammed with riches, and through the swinging doors eddies of people were sucked in and ejected. At the curb the toy peddlers shouted, the chestnut stands sent up their smoke. It seemed as if the millions of the city had poured out to mingle in a street festival of joy and brotherhood. People laughed at one another; a wine of good humor drenched the air. It was as if on this night hate and strife and greed had been sloughed off; as if the race said: "Come, let us be happy with one another. We are all here together. Let us meet and mingle in joy and good will and peace!"

All For the Children.

It was the night of the children. Far through the sleeping city the million children were in their beds, and it was for them that these people met. For their children they were sweeping the shops, that Christmas morning might dawn with the candles of the pine and hanging bulgy stockings and the mysterious new toys. And it was the thought of the children possibly that made these men and women so light footed, so bubblingly joyous, so innocently happy. It made children of them, and they mingled with each other like laughing, rollicking boys and girls.

There was one vast department store, nearly a block square and six stories high, which sucked in vast masses of the crowd. Pendent from its ceilings hung white moons of light, and under these a density of humanity slowly swirled about the sparkling laden counters. The air was overwarm with the excitement of shuffling shoes, rattle of packages and a hive hum of talk and exclamations. The place was electric with the push of many wills, the clash of desires, the impeded hurry, the drawing near of closing time. Thirty had come and gone and yet the crowd was unsatisfied; it hungered and strained and clamored and struggled to get its fill.

Impatient For "Snow."

One counter especially was besieged. At this were sold five cent packages of "snow" for Christmas trees. Behind this counter stood Mamie Riggs, seventeen years old, thin, emaciated, bloodless, her face pale and drawn and wrinkled, her eyes bloodshot, her lips trembling. As she made out checks and received and made change and handled the envelopes her hands visibly shook. Faces crowded near her, leaned close, arms lifted, fingers jerked near her eyes.

"This snow?"
"Yes, ma'am."
"How much?"
"Five cents."
"Only one for five?"
"Only one."
"How much in a package?"
"I don't know, ma'am."
"Don't know?"

No Patience For Shopgirl.

At least five voices interrupted: "See here, I want a half dozen of these." "Where's my change?" "I can't wait all night!" "Isn't there any one to wait on me?" "Say, I'll speak to the floorwalker if I don't get proper attention!"

Mamie answered as best she could. "Just a minute! You said five—six? Change hasn't come. I can't help it, ma'am! Yes, it's five a package!

Snow! Yes, I'll wait on you in a minute!" She spoke evenly in a monotone, but she was doing her work mechanically. In fact, Mamie wasn't "all there." Her fingers and lips kept working, but the real Mamie seemed in a trance. Sunburst after sunburst of faces shot the air before her, a loud sea noise of voices swept her brain, and she felt deathly sick. Every bone in her body ached. It seemed as if her feet had been on fire and were bleeding. She was dizzy, nauseated and dizzy. She felt as if she were going to faint. By sheer force of grit she clung to the counter, she kept upright, she moved, talked, worked. On and on it went minute by minute, and still the faces crowded, the voices rang out, the packages had to be delivered, the change made, the checks written out.

Christmas the Climax.

Afterward it seemed to her that her whole year had been rushing toward this Christmas climax. Most of that year she had worked in a cheaper store—worked nine and a half hours a day for $2.42½ a week. As this was not enough to live on, she had boarded with an aunt in Hoboken, paying her $1.15 a week. But it took her an hour and a quarter to get to work, and she rose early before dawn to get to her counter at 8 sharp. Car fare cost her $1.25, which, with the board, left her 20 cents a week. No recreation, no fresh air, and every few nights she was up all night laundering her clothes that she might be neat appearing. This work, she felt, was killing her, so she left it and took a position in the larger store for $4 a week.

But she had to figure close. She slept near by in a charity dormitory for 6 cents a night. She went without breakfast; lunch and supper consisted of coffee and rolls for 10 cents each, and laundry was 21 cents a week. Clothes and extra came close to $2. In this way she spent all her wages, toiled from 8 a. m. to 6:15 p. m. and on Saturdays till 9:30. Strength does not come on coffee and rolls, nor on nine and a half hours of standing indoors, nor on lack of pleasure and mental growth. Mamie grew sickly, wrinkled and weaker day by day. She was afflicted with violent headaches, and at seventeen she was already a sapped and aged woman, unfit for marriage and child bearing and housework, with no future but incessant toil and no savings against sickness or old age.

This was bad enough. But then the holiday rush began. The store was kept open until 11:30 at night. Mamie grew feverish, had dizzy spells, was too sick to eat. Her condition grew worse each day, and now on this last day she had come to work at 8 in the morning, feeling that she could not endure a half hour of standing up, nor the crowds, nor the noise, nor the bad air.

Christmas Eve a Torture.

That day was a wild, slow torturer, measured by minutes, endless and pitiless. On and on it went, on up to noon, on from 12:45 to 6, on from 6:30 to this very minute.

"This snow? How much? See here, where's my change? Do you think I can wait all night? Say, I'll tell the floorwalker. Yes, wrap me up six, in two packages, please. Isn't there any one else waiting at this counter?"

Sunburst after sunburst of faces, sea roar of talking, dazzling lights, confusion, bustle, noise, hands flying, lips moving, and this would go on for another hour and a half.

A man pushed his way through the crowd. "See here, kid," he cried. "You do me up ten of these—quick!" Mamie leaned forward on the counter and smiled dully.

"Ten, ten?"
"Can't you hear? Eight, nine ten?"
"Ten—ten what?"

She leaned farther forward, she sighed, she slipped, and her arms and face and hair and thin bosom all slouched among the packages on the counter.

Cries went up: "She's fainted! Something's the matter! Get water! Help her up!"

The crowd jammed. The floorwalker broke his way through, muttering. "Mamie down? Thunder! And just now when we can't replace her! Why the devil couldn't the girl stick it out?"

Next morning the nurse in the hospital wished her a merry Christmas.

Still Selling Snow.

She looked up vacantly and went off in a delirium, crying shrilly: "It's 5 cents a package, ma'am! Just a minute! Yes, snow—snow for Christmas trees!"

At the same moment over the widespread city the little children hopped out of bed and ran in their nighties to the parlor. There flamed the candles of the pines; there hung the bulgy stockings; there lay the mysterious packages. Little eyes glistened with awe and wonder, women and men were blinded with happy tears, and the Christmas bells pealed love and brotherhood through the tingling dawn.

And one woman said to another: "The Jam was awful last night. I thought I'd never get home. And the service in the stores was insufferable." Asked the other: "Why didn't you shop earlier in the month?" "Why? Oh, YOU KNOW HOW IT IS!"

ALTHOUGH revolution has been impending in the Mexican republic for the last five years, the present outbreaks are the only ones worthy of being considered serious.

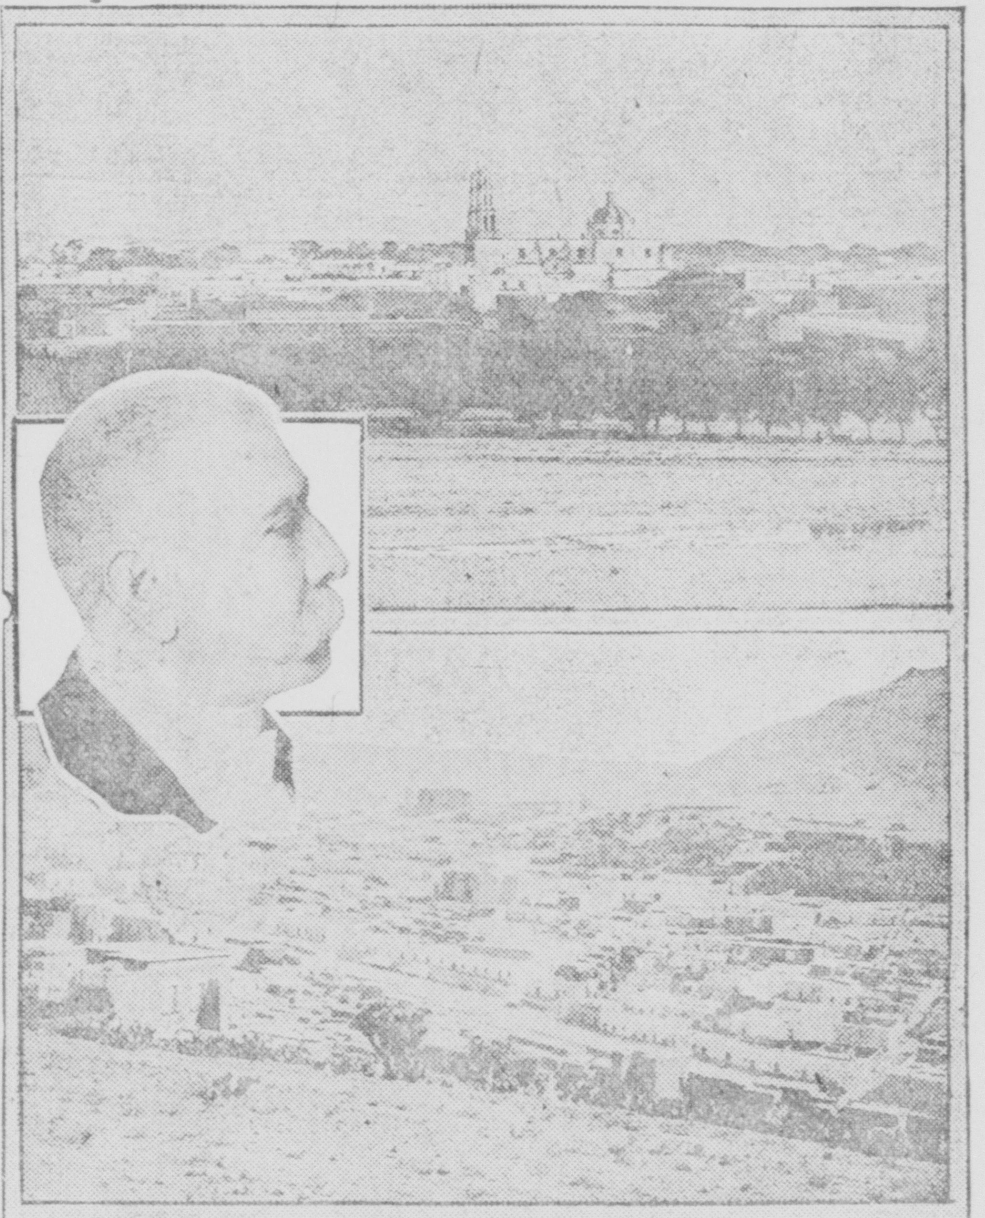

The two central figures in the latest insurrection against the Diaz regime are General Bernardo Reyes and Francisco I. Madero. The active participation of the latter, who was one of the unsuccessful candidates against Diaz in the last election, led to the confiscation of all his Mexican property. Al-

Don Porfirio had planned to retire from the presidency after the close of the second pan-American conference, which was held in Mexico in the winter of 1901-2. Jose Yves de Limantour, minister of finance, was then chosen to succeed Diaz and fill out the unexpired term, after which General Reyes was to come to the head of the government for another period of "re-elections."

Reyes was suspicious that Limantour would not relinquish the presidency at the end of the short term and began to scheme to get the place for himself at once without the intervention of the finance minister. Diaz learned of Reyes' plans, as he learned of everything else that went on in Mexico. He gave a banquet at his city residence in Mexico City, and there was a dramatic scene between him and Reyes.

Then Reyes ceased to be minister of war. For a time he was sent back to Monterey as governor, always closely watched, and finally, about a year ago, was sent abroad on a "confidential military mission."

Now a General Reyes has suddenly made himself known in Paris, praised though these interests were large, it did not leave him a bankrupt, as he has been a heavy investor in American and European securities, possibly foreseeing such trouble as has arisen.

Diaz, Corral, Creel and Limantour, the "big four" of the distrito federal, profess not to fear the activities of Madero, regarding him as a noisy agitator pure and simple. The one man whom Diaz does fear is General Bernardo Reyes, now said to be in residence abroad, where supposedly he is investigating French military organization. He is accompanied by a pair of aids, trusted Diaz followers, who report every one of his actions to the castle on Chapultepec.

Eight years ago Reyes was slated to succeed Diaz in the presidency of Mexico. He was then minister of war, and as such at the head of the army. He was a fiery tempered soldier, who had been governor of the state of Nueva Leon, with headquarters at Monterrey. He had conducted himself so well there that he had been brought to the national capital for closer association with Diaz himself.

SAW BROTHER IN PICTURE.

Rudolph Finds Max Through Cinematograph Show.

Rudolph J. Maller, a New York court interpreter who speaks fourteen languages and has a good story for each, told one in English when he arrived from Europe recently.

About a year ago Mr. Maller, who was born in Turkey, was at a moving picture show. He was startled to see the image of his brother Maximilian, whom he had not seen or heard from in nine years, walk into the picture of an aviation meet at Budapest. He was about to get up and shout the Turkish equivalent for "Say, Max, hold on!" when his brother moved out of the picture.

Mr. Maller got the address of the exchange from which the moving picture showman got the film and finally had a chance to see it again. The film was made by a Paris concern. Mr. Maller went to Paris recently. He traced his brother to Vienna and found him in the moving picture business.

UNCLE SAM HAS MADE BIG HAUL

Sixteen Companies Indicted Under Anti-Trust Law.

PLUMBERS' SUPPLIES TIED UP

In Indictments Returned by Federal Grand Jury at Detroit, Government Charges That the "Bathtub Trust" Has Illegally Conspired to Fix the Prices and Sale of All Articles Used in Sanitary Plumbing.

Washington, Dec. 7.—For violation of the Sherman anti-trust law the presidents and other officers of sixteen companies comprising the bathtub trust have been indicted by the federal grand jury in Detroit. This is one of the biggest hauls, so far as individual prosecutions are concerned, that the department of justice has ever made under the anti-trust law. If the officers are convicted they will be liable to jail sentences and the department undoubtedly will bend every effort to have such punishment meted out instead of fines. The sixteen companies also were indicted as corporations.

The companies in the trust are engaged in the making of sanitary enameled ironware, bathtubs, sinks and other things of a similar character that enter into the construction of nearly every house in the land. The department of justice some time ago brought a civil suit against the combination. The evidence in this suit, according to a statement issued by the department of justice, showed that the annual output of bathtubs and plumbers' supplies aggregated about $15,000,000 a year; that the defendants engaged in the combination fixed prices by agreement and advanced prices so fixed, and regulated by agreement the prices by which the jobbers were permitted to resell the products. The department of justice charges further that the combination refused to sell to jobbers who would not agree to resell at the prices fixed by the combination, and also refused to sell to any jobbers who handled any supplies manufactured by concerns not in the trust.

The evidence, according to the department's statement, tended to show that the defendants knew when they entered into this combination that such an arrangement would be unlawful and that they sought for a device behind which they might conceal the true character of the combination.

The department of justice says further that the evidence shows that the makers appointed a committee on the day they entered into this combination and this committee, with the li-censer, fixed the prices of all the products sold by the combination. The defendants also at a meeting held in New York city, appointed a committee from their number, known as the "price and schedule committee," which was to determine prices and conditions of sale. The department of justice charges that this committee held a ten-day session at Mount Clemens, Mich., several months ago and fixed the prices and conditions of sale for their products.

The department of justice, satisfied that this was a deliberate case of intentional violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, and that a fictitious arrangement for dealing in patented articles had been entered into to conceal the true nature of the transaction, caused the evidence to be submitted to a grand jury at Detroit. This investigation has resulted in the indictments against the officers of the sixteen corporations and the corporations themselves.

INDIGNANT DENIAL

Is Made by August Belmont of Charge Made by Witness.

New York, Dec. 7.—August Belmont, chairman of the Jockey club, who has been a witness in the legislative race track graft inquiry, has issued a statement proclaiming his innocence of all wrongdoing. He said:

"I cannot make too emphatic the statement that I have never directly or indirectly, in person or through any corporation or individuals, contributed, authorized or advised the expenditure of a single dollar to improperly influence legislative action, nor have I been asked to do so.

"Since the giving of my testimony before your committee, it has come to my attention through the newspapers that a most unfair and distorted view of my connection with racing interests is sought to be imbedded in the public mind. Racing with me now and for many years has been a pastime, not a business.

"My interest in racing as sport has prompted me to maintain a general and not a special supervision of the amounts of moneys that were being expended by the associations."

Mr. Belmont offers to aid the committee in any way in his power and to appear before it again if wanted to preclude any opportunity for a misunderstanding as to his acts in regard to racing.

STATISTICS OF INDIANA FARMS

Gratifying Increases Noted in the Past Ten Years.

CENSUS DEPARTMENT FIGURES

In Practically Every Feature of Report Just Issued at Washington It Is Shown That Indiana Has Taken Phenomenal Strides in an Agricultural Way Since the Last Report of the Census Bureau Ten Years Ago.

Washington, Dec. 7.—The first official statement from the census bureau relative to the agricultural statistics of the state of Indiana was given out today by Director Durand. It is pointed out that the principal rates of increase in Indiana in 1910, as against 1900, are: In the average value per acre of all farm land alone, 94 per cent; in the total value of all farm land alone, 93 per cent; in the average value per acre of farm land and buildings, 92 per cent; in the total value of farm land and buildings, 89 per cent; in the total expenditures for labor, 85 per cent; in the total value of buildings alone, 72 per cent; in the total value of all farm implements and machinery, 50 per cent; in expenditures for fertilizers, 40 per cent; in average acres per farm, 2 per cent; and in the total improved farm acreage, 1 per cent.

The principal rates of decrease in 1910 as compared with 1900 are: In the whole number of farms, 3 per cent; and in the total farm acreage, 2 per cent.

The statement shows, in detail, that the number of farms reported in 1910 was 214,741, as compared with 221,897 in 1900, a decrease of 3 per cent.

The total value of the farm land and buildings was given in 1910 as $1,590,225,000, as against $841,735,000 in 1900, an increase of 89 per cent.

The improved acreage was returned in 1910 as amounting to 16,903,000 acres, as against 16,680,000 in 1900, an increase of 1 per cent. In 1910 the improved acreage formed 79 per cent of the total acreage, as against 77 per cent in 1900.

The average acres per farm reported in 1910 was 99, as compared with 97 in 1900, a gain of 2 per cent. The average value per acre of farm land and buildings in 1910 is stated as $75, as against $39 in 1900, a rise of 92 per cent.

The average value per acre of farm land alone in 1910 was reported as $62, while in 1900 it was $32, the amount of gain being 94 per cent.

Of the whole number, 214,741, of farms, reported in 1910 there were 213,937 operated by white farmers and 804 by colored farmers. The total number of farms operated in 1910 by owners, part owners, and owners and tenants, comprising the "all owners" class, was 148,001, as compared with 156,227 in 1900, a decrease of five per cent. The total number conducted in 1910 by cash tenants, share tenants, and cash and share tenants, comprising the "all tenant" class, was 64,451, as against 63,448 in 1900, a gain of 2 per cent. The total number of farms operated by the "all owners" class in 1910 formed 69 per cent of the whole number of farms, as against 70 per cent in 1900; those conducted by the "all tenants" class in 1910 constituted 30 per cent, as against 29 per cent in 1900; and the number operated by managers made but 1 per cent in both 1910 and 1900.

Of the total number, 148,001, of farms operated in 1910 by the "all owners" class, there were 91,213, or 62 per cent, owned free of incumbrance, and 56,788, or 38 per cent, mortgaged. The expenditure for labor in 1910 reached the sum of $17,903,000, as compared with $9,686,000 in 1900, an increase of 85 per cent.

THIS PAPER REPRESENTED FOR FOREIGN ADVERTISING BY THE

GENERAL OFFICES
 NEW YORK AND CHICAGO
 BRANCHES IN ALL THE PRINCIPAL CITIES

Where to Buy.

Indianapolis merchants are fighting for Christmas trade through the papers of that city. They are urging early buying of Christmas goods. Rushville merchants should not stand by and allow the trade which is naturally theirs to be taken away from them. The preventing of it is up to them. The Rushville newspapers have a better circulation than any other papers that come into the Rushville territory. The circulation of the Indianapolis papers in Rush county does not compare with the Rushville papers. The home papers are doing all they can to get the trade of home people for Rushville. They call attention to home merchants. It will cost the Rushville merchants less to advertise in Rushville papers than it costs Indianapolis merchants to advertise their wares through Indianapolis papers in Rush county. The Rushville papers do not advertise merchants of Indianapolis though they could get 50 per cent more per inch from Indianapolis merchants than the home merchants are asked for advertising in the Rushville papers. Again we say it is up to our business men to get the home trade or let it go elsewhere. There is trade in Rush county as good as in any county in the State. It is going to go somewhere. It would naturally come to Rushville but it will not merely drift here, it must be attracted. It must be induced. Other towns are after it. They appreciate its value and they are seeking to get it. The day when business men could simply let their business drift to success is past. Business allowed to drift now will drift to failure. Live business men are the greatest factors in a live town. If merchants have no life the town is dead. Let every business man in Rushville employ the same methods that are being employed by the business men of other towns and cities who are contesting for the business of Rush county, and they will get it. They are on the inside. They have the advantage of position. They are on the ground. Men who are on the ground with best positions, and know the people, and yet let the trade get away from them do not deserve to win.

Rushville merchants can not only hold all the trade they are naturally entitled to, but they can attract trade which naturally would go to other cities by special persistent effort. If it is worth while to be in business it is worth while to obtain all the business that up-to-date methods will induce.

The insurgent press of Indianapolis seems to be very much startled by rumors that the Republicans of Indiana will not be content that the insurgent faction shall remain in control of the party organization in this State, says the Huntington Times (Republican). The intimation that Fairbanks, Hemenway, Watson, Durbin, or any of the old-line leaders are to be recognized in the future has brought up a hysterical attack, and all sorts of maledictions are hurled at them. The bullying tactics of the past campaign are responsible for the defeat of the Republicans of Indiana, and the party will tolerate no more of it. The Republican party should and will be reorganized in the interest of the party and not in the interest of individuals. All factions must be ignored, and all Republicans should be freely accorded their full rights. No more personally conducted conventions or campaigns, but hearty and loyal adherence to Republican principles, equal rights for all, are the signs of the times, and the Republican press of Indiana should at once make itself felt in an effort to bring about such harmonious conditions.

HICKS MAKES HIS USUAL FORECAST

Parson and Weather Prophet Says

Earth Will be Covered With Snow About Christmas.

STORMS, NOTHING BUT THAT

Forecast For First Few Days, Already Experienced, Are Not Far Amiss.

The weather prediction of Parson Hicks were not far off as to the first few days of December, and the conditions foretold have already been experienced. In his prediction for the month Hicks says that we will have a white Christmas—that the earth will be covered by a mantle of snow. His prediction follows:

"A regular storm period is central on the 1st, being in progress from the westward as December comes in. Low barometer and storms of rain and snow will traverse central to eastern sections on the 1st, 2d and 3d, followed closely by the anti-storm conditions from the northern—that is by rising barometer, high northerly winds, and very much colder. General cold will prevail over most parts of the country from about the 3rd to 6th. A seismic period, beginning in November, is central on December 1, extending to the 4th.

"A regular storm period is central on the 6th, 7th and 8th. This period will lead directly to the beginning of earth's winter solstice, combined with a mercury period. Threatening weather with rain and snow will be general at this time, merging into the storm period next following.

"A regular storm period extends from the 10th to the 15th, being central on the 12th. This period is exactly coincident with the annual December crisis of magnetic perturbations. The disturbed compass, volcanic unrest and seismic trouble are all natural results of astronomical conditions at this time. For three or four days before and after the 6th, look for much seismic trouble, with volcanic eruptions and dangerous tidal waves at diagonal extremes of both the northern and southern hemispheres.

A reactionary storm period falls on the 16th, 17th and 18th at the center of the Mercury period. Winter gales and blizzards from the preceding period will run into this period, making a stormy spell on sea and land for many days. Navigation on the North Atlantic ocean will be perilous through all this part of December. Note this forecast.

A regular storm period covers the 21st to 27th, central on the 24th. This period is at the center of December solstice and it will bring to a marked degree midwinter storms of rain, sleet and blizzards. Vigilance on land and sea will avert at this and other December storm periods. Snow high northwest gales and a great cold wave will be in sight to most parts on or close to Christmas.

A reactionary storm period covers the last three days of the month and year. This period will bring change to warmer falling barometer and renewed rain and snow. A seismic period extends three to four days on either side of the 31st. Hence seismic reports will be natural any time from December 28 to January 3, 1911.

OTHER COUNTIES FAVOR WORKHOUSE

May be Erected For Special Accommodation of Professional Tourists Who Eat Much.

BUT ARE AVERSE TO WORK

In several counties surrounding Rush county, the need of a workhouse is being emphasized by the increasing number of calls made upon the sheriffs for breakfast or other meals by vagrants who are traveling over the country. In some counties the commissioners favor the workhouse plan but they have no funds available for the purpose.

The plan has been talked of in this county but no definite step was ever taken in the matter. The installing of a workhouse in any county would undoubtedly cause the professional tourists to change their routes so as to avoid that place, as but very few of that class care to soil their hands with honest toil. They would much rather have their living by the sweat of the other man's brow.

AMUSEMENTS

The Vaudeet will offer another double program tonight. The first is a Nestor film entitled "In the Black Hills." This is said to be a very thrilling drama. The second picture is an Imp film, "Debt." This is equally as good as the first. A new illustrated song will be sung.

The Star Grand offers two pictures tonight. The first is a Pathe entitled "Around Pekin," a most interesting scenic picture displaying among other views camel caravans, the great walls of China, and the funeral of a mandarin. The second picture is an American Pathe entitled "Outwitted," a sensational picture with a good holding story, but with no unpleasant scenes. Earl Robertson will sing "When Friendship Turns to Love."

The Palace will show two American Pathe pictures tonight. The first "One on Max" is a comedy showing the peculiar situations of a merely engaged man. The second picture is entitled "Jinks Wants to be an Acrobat." An evening at a vaudeville show makes Jinks ambitions to become an acrobat. He chooses the street as being the most convenient place to commence in, and every possible means of practicing is utilized by him, often with the most disastrous results. A new illustrated song will be sung.

"They Loved a Lassie," a farce with music, the book by George Arliss, the well-known actor, and the music by Sylvia Hein, will be seen at the Murat in Indianapolis the last three days of the week. The farce has to do with the adventures of two truant husbands from London who journey to Scotland instead of embarking on an ocean trip. In the Highlands, they come across the girl that both had loved before their marriage. The encounter and the subsequent complications supply the foundation for the farce's fun. Charles E. Evans and Adele Ritchie appear in the leading roles. They are supported by a competent company of experienced players. The second night of the engagement will be "Scottish night" and the theater will be decorated accordingly and the orchestra and company will be heard in appropriate songs. There will be a matinee performance Saturday afternoon.

HUNTER

LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE FROM THE PLAY OF THE SAME TITLE BY WINCHELL SMITH

COPYRIGHT, 1910, BY WINCHELL SMITH AND LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

He gathered himself together and by a supreme effort lunged through the door and into the deepening dusk.

"Well, Roly?" Nat asked, turning back.

His ironic calm gave Roland pause. For a moment he lost his bearings and stammered in confusion. "I come in to tell you that me and you's apt to have trouble," he concluded.

"Oh? And are you thinking of starting it?"

"You bet I'll start it, and I'll start it quick if you don't leave Josie Lockwood alone."

"So that's the trouble, is it?" commented Nat thoughtfully.

"Yes, that's the trouble. From now on I want you to let her alone, and you'll do it, too, if you know what's best for you."

A suggestion of menace in his manner, unconnected with any hint of physical correction, caught Nat's attention. He frowned over it.

"Just what do you mean by this line of talk?" he inquired blandly, stepping nearer.

"I'll tell you what I mean." Roland clinched both fists and thrust his chin out pugnaciously. "I'd been a-goin' steady with Josie Lockwood for more'n a year before you come here and thought that on account of her money you could sneak in and cut me out."

"Was her money the reason you were after her, Roly?"

"What?" The question brought Roland momentarily up in the wind. "Tain't none of your business if it was!" he snapped, recovering. "But here's what I'm gettin' at." He tapped his breast pocket with a sneer of bucolic triumph. "Just about ten months ago," he continued meaningly, "there was a cashier skipped out of the Long-acre National bank in New York, and they ain't got no trace of him yet."

So this was why Roland had been so assiduous a student of the back files in the Citizen office!

"Indeed?"

"Yes, indeed. I had my suspicions all along, but didn't say nothin', but just today I got a description of him, and the description just fits, Mr. Mortimer Henry."

"Just fits Mr. Mortimer Henry? But what has that?"

"Ah, don't you try to seem too darn' innocent," Roland snarled. "You can't fool me!"

A light dawned upon Nat, and laughter flooded his being, although outwardly he remained imperturbable—merely mildly curious. But his fingers were itching.

"So you think I'm the absconding cashier, eh, Roly?"

"You keep away from Josie 'r you'll find out what I think." Nat's placidly deceived Roland, who drew the wholly erroneous conclusion that he had succeeded in frightening his rival, and consequently dared a few lengths further in his tirade. "Why, if I was to go to Mr. Lockwood and tell him you're Mortimer Henry, alias Nat Duncan?"

"That will do," icily. "That will be all for this evening, thanks."

"Are you goin' to quit chasin' after Josie?"

"I'll begin chasing after you if you don't clear out of here."

"You better agree!"

Just there the storm burst. Ten seconds later Roland, with a confused impression of having been kicked by a mule, picked himself up out of the dust in the middle of the street and stared stupidly back at the store.

"Here's your hat, Roly," called Nat. Tossing him the hat, Nat turned contemptuously.

He paused in the middle of the store and felt of his necktie. It proved to be a little out of place, but otherwise he was as immaculate as his was wont. He reviewed the encounter and laughed quietly.

"There's no cure for a fool," he mused.

The telephone bell roused him from his reverie. He went over to the instrument, sat down and put the receiver to his ear.

"Hello!" he said. "Oh, hello, Josie! What's that? That's right, but I'm not used to it yet, you know. Well, I'll try again. Now—ready?"

NO MORE GRAY HAIR

It is easier to preserve the color of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made and used a "sage tea," and their dark, glossy hair long after middle life was due to this fact. Our mothers have gray hairs before they are fifty, but they are beginning to appreciate the wisdom of our grandmothers in using "sage tea" for their hair, and are fast following suit. The present generation has the advantage of the past in that it can get a ready to use preparation called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur. As a scalp tonic and color restorer, this preparation is vastly superior to the ordinary "sage tea" made by our grandmothers, and it can be bought for 50 cents and $1 a bottle at almost any first-class drug store, or will be sent direct by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 71 Cortlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price.

For sale and recommended by Hargrove & Mullin.

WONDERFUL REMEDY

That's What is Said of Stomach Prescription Guaranteed by John-N son's Drug Store.

Stephen Waite of Lansing, Michigan writes:

"For over three years I suffered much pain and annoyance from stomach disease. I had no help from my digestive organs, food would stay in my stomach and ferment, causing gas and dizzy headaches. I doctor-ed and used every remedy that I heard of, but it remained for MI-O-NA to cure me entirely. Before I had used three boxes, my appetite and digestive organs became all right. It is a wonderful remedy."

MI-O-NA stomach tablets are small and easy to swallow. They stop the most painful distress in five minutes. They drive out sourness and gas and make the stomach clean and sweet.

They are sold by Johnson's Drug Store under a positive guarantee to cure any case of indigestion, or money back.

They put vigor and vitality into people run down by indigestion. Sold by Johnson's Drug Store and leading druggists everywhere at 50 cents a large box.

He schooled his voice to a key of heartrending sentiment. "Hello, darling. How's that? Told your father? Told him what? Oh, about the engagement? Was he angry? Oh, he wasn't, eh? What did he say? Wasn't that nice of him?"

Conscious of a slight noise in the store, he looked up. A young woman had just entered. She paused just inside the door, smiling at him a little timidly.

Without another word to his fiancée Nat put down the telephone and hooked up the receiver.

"Betty!" he cried wonderingly.

CHAPTER XXI.

BENEATH the brim of her dainty hat, with veil thrown back, Betty's dark hair waved back, glossy with the sheen of perfect well being, from a face serenely charming, the more so for her slightly deepened flush, and the eyes that shone into Nat's danced with the light of enjoyment, bred of his supreme astonishment.

Her father, who had left Kellogg and come in to get Nat's advice regarding some large orders received that day, greeted her warmly, gave her a parting bug and retired.

"Nat, I'm so glad to see you again!" "It's such a surprise, Betty!"

"I knew it would be. I just couldn't wait, Nat, when I found I could get here by the night train instead of tomorrow morning I haven't been home, you know, but I couldn't resist the temptation to stop in here and see what the store looked like after all these months. Besides, I thought that you or father?" Her eyes fell, and she faltered, withdrawing her hands.

By now he had himself in hand. "Why," he laughed, "you nearly took my breath away. Even now I can hardly believe it."

"Believe what, Nat?" she asked quickly.

"That you're the same little Betty Graham. I never saw such a change."

"It's a change for the better, isn't it, Nat?" she asked, with a smile half wistful.

"I should think it was. It's just marvelous."

"Did I seem so very awful, then?" "Nonsense. You know you didn't, only now."

"Then you think father will be pleased?"

"If he isn't I'm blind."

She looked away, embarrassed and touched by his interest and his feeling. "And does it make you a little proud, Nat?"

"Proud!" he exclaimed blankly. "Because you know you've done it all. If there's any improvement in Betty Graham today it's because of you. If it hadn't been for you?"

She shook her head very decidedly, seating herself on one of the chairs by the soda fountain. "Why, Nat, don't you suppose I have any memory?" she went on. "You began making me a better girl the very first day we met here in the store by the things you said to me. And ever since I've been watching you while you were making life a heaven for father and me and thinking that if I were a man I'd try to be as near like you as I could."

"Oh, don't say that!" he pleaded wretchedly.

"It's true. And when you sent me away to school I promised myself I'd try to repay you for the sacrifice you must be making for me; that I'd follow your example as nearly as ever I could; that I'd work hard and try to treat people the way you do—kindly, Nat, and considerately and bravely and tenderly and honestly!"

He dropped into a chair near her and buried his head in his hands. "Don't!" he begged huskily. "Please, Betty, don't!"

She bent forward and took one of his hands, patting it softly. "Nat, I think you're the very best man in the whole world."

"Don't!" he groaned. "Don't, for heaven's sake!"

"Oh, I know, Nat—I know you don't like me to say this, but I must, just the same, tell you the truth about myself. It's so splendid to live the life you do. You're all unconscious of it, but I want you to realize it and know that I do too. You've made everybody love you, and"

But confusion silenced her, and she gently replaced his hand. For several moments neither spoke. Then Nat broke the tension with a short, hard laugh.

"That's right," he said inscrutably; "that was the idea."

"Nat, what do you mean?" He turned to her. "Betty, does it make you—feel that way toward me?" She colored divinely. "Why, Nat, of course. Why, every one!"

"That's why I came here, Betty," he pursued, blind to her embarrassment. "I came here with the idea of getting married."

He was staring gloomily at the floor and could not see the light that dawned upon the girl's face.

"You never guessed that, did you?"

"That's why I came here, Betty," he pursued, blind to her embarrassment. "I came here with the idea of getting married."

THROW OUT THE LINE

Jones Raysville, near Knightstown, Ind., says: "In June, 1907 I publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills and now after a lapse of three years, I have no reason to alter by high opinion of them. I procured Doan's Kidney Pills and their use brought me prompt and lasting relief from lumbago and severe pains through my kidneys that had caused me great annoyance. I shall always take pleasure in telling of my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills."

"No," she breathed brokenly. "No, Nat, I!"

"Well, it's the truth, and"—He rose and moved away. "But I can't tell you just now—not now."

"No, not now, Nat." Betty, too, got up. "I think I'd better go home and see father. I mustn't forget"—She faltered, half blinded by the mist of the happiness before her eyes.

"No—wait." She stopped to find his gaze full upon her. For the first time he comprehended that she had not understood—that, worst of all, she had misunderstood. "I must tell you," he blurted desperately; "I must."

Instinctively she moved a step toward him. He hung his head.

"Tonight, Betty—this evening, just a little while ago, I became engaged to Josie Lockwood."

She stood as if petrified throughout a wait that seemed to both interminable.

"Oh, Nat, dear," she said, "I'm so glad for you. I wish you all the happiness in the world. I—Good night."

The hand slipped out of Nat's. He did not move, but waited there with his empty palm outstretched, despair in his eyes and hell in his heart, while she walked quietly from the store.

After some time he awoke to the knowledge that she was gone.

"Blithering fool!" he growled. "Why didn't I know I loved her like this?" He took a turn to and fro, distracted.

"And now I've made a mess of everything. Good Lord, what can I do? I must do something or go mad!" He swung round behind the soda fountain counter and seized a bottle. "I know what! The rules are off! I can have a drink! I can have two drinks! I can have a million drinks if I want 'em!"

Pouring a generous dose of raw whisky into the glass, he lifted it to his lips and threw back his head. But the heavy bouquet of the liquor was stifling in his nostrils, and the first mouthful of it almost choked him. In a fury he flung the glass from him so that it crashed and splintered upon the floor. "Great heavens," he cried, "I don't like the stuff any more! But"—his gaze fell upon the cigar case—"I can have a smoke. That'll help some."

With feverish haste he snatched a cigar from the nearest box, gnawed off one end and, thrusting the other into the alcohol lighter, puffed vigorously. But to his renovated palate the potent fumes of the tobacco were no less repugnant than the whisky had been. Half strangled, he plucked the cigar from his mouth and stamped on it.

"Oh," he cried wildly, "I'll be—I'll be damned!"

He paused, staring vacantly at nothing. "And even that doesn't do any good! God help me, I've forgotten how to swear!"

To him in this overwrought state came Tracey, lumbering cheerfully in his mouth shaped for a whistle. At sight of Nat he pulled up as if hit by a club.

"Evenin', Mr. Duncan. What's the matter?"

By an effort Nat brought his gaze to bear upon the boy and comprehended his existence.

"Ain't you feelin' well, Mr. Duncan?" "No—rotten!"

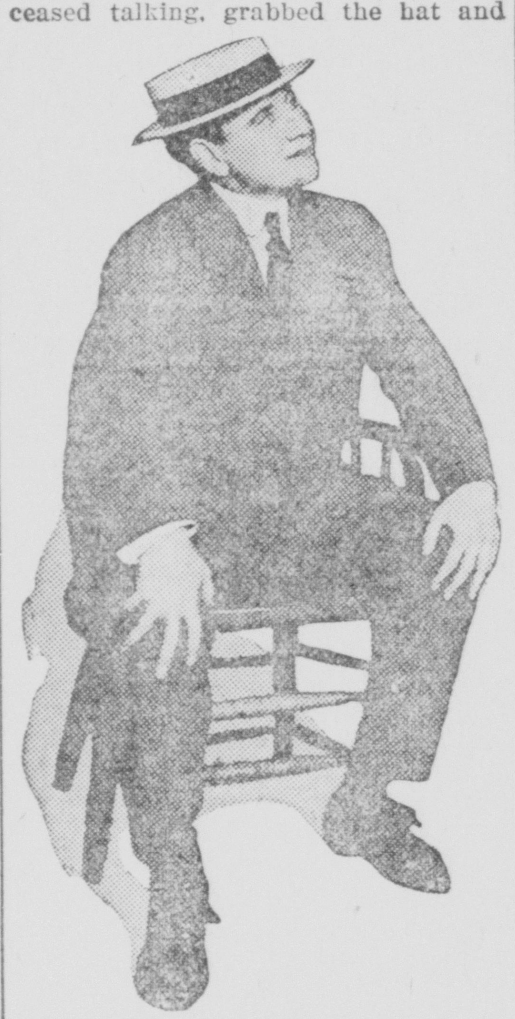

"What's the matter?" "Nothing!" Nat shouted ferociously.

"Anything I kin?" "No!"

At that instant Kellogg appeared. "Hello, Nat! What's been keeping you? I came down to bring you home to supper."

"Go to blazes with your supper! Keep away from me! Don't talk to me! I don't want anything to do with you, d'you understand? You and your confounded systems have got me into all this!"

He caught sight of his hat abruptly, ceased talking, grabbed the hat and jammed it on his head, muttering, then started on a run for the door.

"But what's the matter?" demanded Kellogg, thunderstruck. "Here! Hold on! Where are you going?"

"To the only place I can get any consolation. I'm going to church!"

GOVERNMENT UNABLE TO COPE WITH REBELS

Latter Are In Control Around Chihuahua.

City of Mexico, Dec. 7.—Government papers officially confirm the rumor that Guerrero is in the hands of the rebels. They are holding seventy-five prisoners, including the mayor, who were defending the town.

General Hernandez has arrived from the north. He says the rebels control the situation around Chihuahua. The government lost more than 600 troops and seems unable to cope with the rebellion.

The former governor of Chihuahua ordered all foreigners engaged in business in that territory to come into the city, as he will not be responsible for what happens to them if they stay outside.

The police say that they have discovered a plot in Vera Cruz to blow up the bridges of the Mexican railway. Various arrests have been made.

"DOWN WITH TYRANTS"

This is the Cry of the People of Northern Mexico.

El Paso, Tex., Dec. 7.—The inauguration of Alberto Terrazas as governor of the state of Chihuahua, Mexico, is not expected to produce an effect of quiet in northern Mexico among the insurgents, for one of the complaints of the men in arms is "against the oppression of the Terrazas family."

This complaint has been made for years. General Luis Terrazas, father of the new governor, is the richest man in the state and has virtually controlled it for years. Cortezar, the secretary of state, is his son-in-law, and Enrique Creel, the former governor, but now minister of foreign affairs for Mexico, is a son-in-law, also. General Terrazas was himself governor of the state prior to Creel's election. General Juan A. Hernandez, who has been placed in command of the troops simultaneously with the elevation of young Terrazas, is another man who is very unpopular with the people, but he is said to be a fighter who shows no quarter, which is taken to mean that Diaz is ready for a war of extermination against the rebellious natives.

Accidentally Shot Son.
Columbus, Ind., Dec. 7.—William Shadrack, a farmer near here, while trying to rout a rabbit from a pile of rails that he might shoot it, accidentally discharged his shotgun, tearing of the right arm of his son, Lester, aged 6. The boy almost died from the loss of blood.

W. K. Vanderbilt, jr., is slated for the presidency of the New York Central lines. W. C. Brown wants to give up railroading and go to farming. W. K. Jr. has been acting as assistant to Brown for some months.

THE STEUDEN STATUE

A Memorial to Revolutionary Hero Unveiled at Washington.

A SIMPLE SERVICE WILL MARK FUNERAL

No Display When Mrs. Eddy's Body Is Laid Away.

Boston, Dec. 7.—Tomorrow afternoon in Mount Auburn cemetery, a few miles away from the home at Newton which has been hers during the later years of her life, the body of Mary Baker G. Eddy will be laid at rest. Until the directors of the Mother Church in Boston shall have decided upon a suitable lot for the interment, Mrs. Eddy's body will lie in a receiving vault in the cemetery after the funeral services which are to be held in the house where she passed away.

The founder of the sect which now numbers more than 2,000,000 devotees will lie in her final sleep among a noted company. Mount Auburn, one of the most noted homes of the dead in the country, was consecrated in 1831, and there lie the bones of such as James Russell Lowell, Henry W. Longfellow, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Phillis Brooks, Charlotte Cushman, Edwin Booth, Charles Sumner, Louis Agassiz, Robert C. Winthrop and Mrs. James Parton.

The funeral services which are to be conducted by Judge Clifford P. Smith, first reader of the mother church, will be read by the side of the casket in the dim parlor of the house at Newton. There will be few present and these will be members of the board of directors and of the Eddy household at the Newton mansion. George W. Glover, Mrs. Eddy's only surviving son, and Ebenezer J. Foster Eddy, Mrs. Eddy's adopted son, who lives in Waterbury, will be there. Immediately after the funeral services, which are to be brief and of the utmost simplicity, a small funeral cortege will start from the Eddy mansion in Newton to Mount Auburn. There will be no services at the receiving vault.

TO BE THE BEST IN THE SERIES

Good Roads Congress Is Unusually Representative.

IMPORTANCE OF MOVEMENT

In Address of Welcome to Delegates Representing Forty States, Gov. Marshall Emphasized Importance of Good Roads Movement—President MacDonald Says Delegates Represent 92 Per Cent of Population.

Indianapolis, Dec. 7.—The delegates to the American Good Roads congress here were officially welcomed by Governor Marshall, for the state; Mayor Shank, for the city, and C. A. Kenyon for the Indiana Good Roads association, while William Fortune, who acted as temporary chairman of the convention, added a few more words of welcome for good measure.

The governor emphasized the importance of the good roads movement, and congratulated those present on their connection with so important a phase of life. Mayor Shank contented himself with telling the delegates how they could get out of trouble if they happened to wander from the straight and narrow path.

In responding to the welcome, James H. MacDonald, president of the American Road Builders' association, the annual convention of which the congress also marks, asserted that the meeting would prove to be the most notable gathering in the interest of good roads that had ever been held in this country.

"We already have present more than have ever attended a first session before," he said, "and we have assurances that delegates will be present representing forty states and representing 92 per cent of the population of the United States."

UNAUTHORIZED

Was the Report Sent Out Regarding Indiana Reformatory.

Indianapolis, Dec. 7.—Charles L. Murr of this city, a member of the committee of the State Federation of Labor, selected to visit the state reformatory and the state prison and prepare a report to the state organization on the conditions of convict labor in the two institutions, declares that the report made by P. K. Rheinbold of Terre Haute, concerning conditions at the state reformatory was not official and that it did not represent the sentiments of the committee. Rheinbold is a member of the committee. Murr made the statement after a long distance telephone conversation with O. P. Smith of Logansport, chairman of the committee, and said that Smith concurred in his statement.

Murr said further that the report was not yet ready to be made public and that its contents were entirely different from the statement made by Rheinbold. The Terre Haute man made a number of severe charges against the management of the state reformatory.
